PREFACE.

CLASSMATES: —

In accordance with the intention expressed in my first Report, issued at the time of our graduation, I now present you with a short record of the life of each member of the class for the past three years. The period has been, for most of us, almost, if not quite as much a time of study and preparation as were the previous four years; and, consequently, the record is, in most cases, very brief. That it is so, however, in so large a proportion of the lives, is owing to the failure of about one-half of the class to answer my circular, sent out several months since, — leaving me to supply, in the best way that I could, the facts which they could have furnished with so little trouble. My regret on this score is not so much that it has entailed more labor upon myself, as that the inevitable result must be a less complete and a less accurate account than could otherwise have been given. I have endeavored, so far as I have been able, to include all items of interest or importance, without going at length into statistics and dates, more properly recorded in the Class-Book. If every one who is dissatisfied with the few lines I have here given him, will remember, when the time comes for a new Report, that the Secretary does not "know every thing already," as seems to be the prevailing idea, even among those from whom I have received letters, I can hope to make my fourth Report full, interesting, and valuable, in a much greater degree than is the present very imperfect one.

I have included in the Report all that I knew concerning those members of the class who did not remain with us until the end of the college course. In 1867, I addressed invitations to those who had left college before graduation, asking them to continue their connection with the class. Several expressed their desire to do so, as will be seen on a subsequent page; and I shall be happy to have any additions made to this number in the future. The Faculty have recommended Garbutt for a degree of A.B., out of course, this year.

Our circle has been broken but once by death. O'Connell died of yellow fever, in Venezuela, in 1868. I am indebted to his father for a sketch of his life, which he had neglected to prepare for the Class-Book.

Fifteen marriages are recorded in their proper place, and there are nearly as many more engagements. There are three babies.

The statement of the condition of the Class-Fund will be found in its proper place. The advantages of having the triennial suppers free — which can only be done by having considerably more money than I now have — are so obvious, that it is to be hoped those subscriptions as yet unpaid will not remain so any longer than can be helped.

The "Harvard Class Subscription Fund" has been started by a few; but is not nearly so large as it should and might be, if all would do their part.

GEO. C. MANN,

Class Secretary.

"I left New York on the 10th of August, 1867, for Shanghae, via Panama, San Francisco, and Japan. The trip through the Inland Sea is very romantic and interesting. The currents are very strong, and passages narrow. Hermitages on the cliffs of small volcanic islands, princes' fortresses, waving fields, and thriving towns on every hand, — and passed, too, in steamers of the largest class, within a stone's throw. I arrived in Shanghae on October 5th, and on the last of the month took a trip to the Taihu Lake, about seventy-five miles in the interior, where we were storm-bound for three days, on an island. All the country about shows the ravages of the rebels, and especially the city of Soochow, once one of the finest cities of the empire. For miles inside the walls it is a desolate waste, and I shot wild pigeons and pheasants among the ruins. Two hundred thousand persons were massacred here a few years ago, and the streets literally ran blood. Since then, with the exception of a short trip to Ningpo, my time has been passed as a mercantile assistant [in the house of Frazar & Co.]. Last autumn I had the pleasure of pulling in an American crew, against the English, Scotch, and Germans, and of winning. I hope, in a year or two, to return home."

* WILLIAM DAVID O'CONNELL. Born in Boston, February 2, 1847.

Engaged successfully in trade with Venezuela, after graduation, and died of yellow fever in Maracaybo, December 4, 1868, after an illness of eight days.

The following is extracted from a sketch of his life, prepared for the class-book by his father.

"In January, 1868, a pair of adventurers laid a scheme to plunder, and succeeded in inducing his father to invest a few thousand dollars in an adventure for William's interest, to Maracaybo, Venezuela. He discovered the treachery of the parties before the vessel, which he had chartered, sailed from Boston; and, making William, then just of age, his attorney, he sent him, at his own request, as owner and supercargo. His father took every precaution, by procuring letters of introduction to some leading men there, particularly to the British consul, to defeat the treachery of the parties who induced the undertaking; and, fortunately, upset their plans. William succeeded in disposing of part, only, of the cargo; returned with the part that remained unsold, bringing with him enough of the product of the country to fill the vessel. He discharged all the duties and obligations that devolved on him, with prudence, good sense, and a forethought and care that would be creditable to a far older head, and gave unmistakable evidence of a sound, discriminating, business mind, and more than ordinary executive ability. While there, he, anxious to continue a business that promised success, formed, unhappily, a copartnership with two gentlemen, natives of the place, with a view to the importation of ice thither, as well as such goods from Boston as could be imported only on ice; he representing one-half of the business, and contributing one-half of the capital stock. They obtained, from the local government, the exclusive privilege of landing, duty free, and selling ice there, for eight years; and by that business alone, a fortune, he saw, by industry and prudence, was only a question of a few years. Having disposed of his return cargo in Boston, he went out again, in pursuance of the terms of the compact with his partners, carrying with him another cargo (the greater part ice), and an ice-house, which was fitted here, and which he erected there on his second arrival. He returned again to Boston with a cargo of fustic and dry goat and deer skins; went out the third time on the 7th of October, with another cargo, and the very next day after despatching home the vessel in which he went out, laden with a cargo of fustic, — concluding to remain in the place, as well to attend to the care of his increasing business as to become master of the Spanish language; and having, by several letters written to his father, by mail and by his own vessel, and others leaving that port, ordered the chartering of another vessel with a cargo, without awaiting the arrival in Boston of his own vessel, which he had then despatched, — he was taken sick on the 26th of November, with yellow fever, which terminated fatally, he dying on the 4th of December, 1868, at 4 o'clock in the morning. He was buried the evening of that day, at 6 P.M., in Maracaybo.

"He had earned for himself, and for his family, in the short time of his business transactions and sojourn there, so much respect and esteem, that his funeral was attended, not only by the principal merchants of the city, native and foreign, but as well by the entire state government and all dignitaries therewith connected."

At a class-meeting held at the office of William Brigham, Esq., January 18, 1869, the following resolutions were presented by a committee consisting of Messrs. Chaplin, Lambert, and Sanborn, and unanimously adopted: —

"Whereas, Our heavenly Father has been pleased to remove from us a beloved classmate, W. D. O'Connell,

"Resolved, that while we accept with due submission his decree, and believe that in this, as in all his ways, he has acted according to infinite wisdom and mercy, we nevertheless mourn deeply the loss of one who has been for years so dear to us, and whose kindness of heart made him loved by all who knew him;

"That in this first break in our circle, death has taken one of the most promising of our number, whose faithfulness, ability, and enterprise bid fair to make him an honor to his class and college;

"That we feel the deepest sympathy with the family of our deceased classmate, and trust that He who has brought this affliction will also bring them comfort."

CLASS OF 1867.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

No. 2.

Class Committee.

GEORGE COMBE MANN, Class Secretary.
JOSEPH LEAVITT SANBORN.
ARTHUR BROOKS.

TO THE CLASS.

The present report is issued mainly for the sake of the list of addresses; but it contains such other matters of class interest as have come within the knowledge of the Secretary during the past year. Letters have been written to former members, inviting them to continue their connection with the Class, and several of these have received favorable attention. The Secretary would repeat his request to all, that they should send him a letter at least once a year, without which it will be impossible to prepare satisfactory reports. The month of May is the best time to write; and he hopes that a printed reminder next spring will not meet with the inattention so apt to be bestowed on a circular. In all cases of marriages, births, &c., be particular to give dates and names in full. It should be remembered that after this year Commencement will take place on the Tuesday after the last Monday in June.

The success of the Class-fund has been very good. Over $3,500 has been subscribed, and about $600 actually paid in. Some $900 more are due this year, and each one should remember to pay his share immediately. Only eleven of the class have neglected to state their intentions and ability in regard to it.

It will be seen, by reference to the proper place, that the Class have been occupied as follows: Law, 30; Business, 18; Teaching, 12; Medicine, 5; Engineering, 5; Divinity, 3. The number of those who have been in Europe is 18; number still there, 15.

Number married, 5; former members, 2; number of present engagements, 8.

GEO. C. MANN, Class Secretary.

"Being assured that it would not be judicious for me to go back again, I engaged on my own account in the manufacture of stoneware at Whitehall, Ill. Through a partner I took after getting the business started, I met with some reverses in the next three or four months. After getting rid of him as quickly as possible, I continued the business alone nearly eighteen months longer. In September, 1868, I was compelled to yield to the pressure of circumstances, and failed, giving up all my property, amounting to $7,500, to satisfy creditors for about an equal amount.

"Within a week of my failure, I was appointed principal of the Mason City schools, with three assistants. The schools have grown rapidly in numbers and popularity. The enrolment of the year is four hundred and sixty scholars, and there are seven assistant teachers. I expect to stay here another year, and shall probably then go West, perhaps to Colorado.
